

Executed In Prison.

THE HANGING OF SIX DESPRADRES BY THE INMATES OF THE ANDERSONVILLE STOCKADE.

On the 30th of June, under the leadership of a mysterious character known as "Lumber Jim," but the real name of whom has never yet been ascertained, a vigilance committee was organized, in Andersonville, and the members of it were known in camp as the "regulars." The original object of the organization was the breaking up of the band of raiders and the enforcement of order throughout the camp. "Lumber Jim" was the leading spirit of the vigilance committee, and under his direction a number of raiders were arrested. The rebel authorities, who were at least interested in preventing the camp from being infested with a pack of human wolves, thereby rendering the duties of their troops less burdensome in keeping the encampment in subjection, consented that the arrested raiders should be tried by Union soldiers, and, if found guilty, sentenced to execution. It was believed that this course would have a wholesome effect, and full liberty was extended to the vigilance committee to do what they pleased with the offenders.

They were tried under form of a law extempore for the occasion, and six of the men were found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hung. The 11th of July was set as the day for execution, and before noon a scaffold was erected in the camp under one of the most enchanting of Georgia skies. When marched into the camp the wretched men were left face to face with their executioners, and not less than 3,000 stood around them. A Catholic priest who had been with the half dozen desperades fulfilling the duties of his office as spiritual adviser, made an earnest, impassioned appeal for the preservation of their lives; but, seeing his efforts unavailing, he sought the condemned men to turn their attention to God who alone could have mercy upon them. The men whose hands had been stained with a thousand crimes, if not with the blood of their fellow-prisoners, were compelled to ascend the scaffold, and the execution was proceeded with.

Pending the consummation of the arrangements, one of the men broke from the platform on which the six were standing with the executioner, who was none other than "Lumber Jim," and his aids, and made a desperate struggle for life. The crowd gave way for the instant and let him through the living environment into the open camp. The pursuit, however, was too desperate as the flight, and the wretched man was recaptured and brought back to the place of execution. Fags were drawn over the heads of the trembling culprits, and the ropes with which they were to be hung were adjusted around their necks. "Lumber Jim" was the last man to leave the platform. As he descended the rough ladder he halted for a moment, and, touching a spring, sent the half dozen men down the fatal leap. An exclamation of horror was heard from 20,000 lips. In the fall the ringleader had broken his rope and fell unharmed at the foot of the vast concourse. It was but the work of an instant, seemingly, by which his executioners forced him to re-ascend the scaffold. With face whiter than a ghost the doomed leader glanced at his associates struggling with death at his side. Just as the bag was again forced over his head shutting out forever the light of day from his sight, he cried out with immeasurable agony of mind, "Boys pray for me" being the last words he ever uttered. The executioner "Lumber Jim," was immediately guarded out of camp, and was never again seen inside the stockade.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men comprised the entire working force in the manufacture of the Jones Bros. Gold Watch Case. Now over four hundred are employed, and the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is that in the Jones Bros. Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to work is used to make the case, which can be said to be strength to the core, is of strenuous metal than solid gold, gold which could be melted, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at a cost less than the cost.

Over 2,000 of these cases are made every week, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

JONES BROS., New York, 1882.

A. W. MARSH, of the Jones Bros. Gold Watch Case Co., who has a large collection of watch cases and carried it into a new market, has recently sold it to a customer. The customer has since sold it to another, and so on until it has come to me, and I am satisfied that it will be a good investment. This is the Jones Bros. Gold Watch Case for many years, and I am sure it will be a good investment, and I am satisfied that it will be a good investment.

WOMAN AND THE BABY.

What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy! How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster! How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows! And yet she hits him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night. Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Pillers. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid. Brown's Iron Pillers helps worn and weary women into new life, cheerfulness, and vigor. Tell all the mothers you know.

MRS. R. MARX.

Between Keystone and National Roads. SELINSGROVE, PA.

In the Pilot House.

Very often a kind of work requires a keeper to judge of the best men in the world, and among them the best railroad engineers should be kept above. For on their clearance of right and wrong it depends the safety of the line and property.

Keeping him on the wheel as he held this, Mr. J. Brockman, No. 2½ Silver street, Philadelphia, Pa., is one of the best men in the world, and the other ones have the best positions and the best pay. Yet, the work and expense sometimes are so great that he goes to work for PARKER'S TONIC in the winter. I have a bottle of Parker's Tonic in the house. I can keep him here all winter, but I have to pay him $100 a month. When I have no appetite, or am not able to eat, I take a bottle of Parker's Tonic, and it makes me feel well again. Drinking men would use the tonic, if it could help them to break off. (Now, isn't that a good tonic?)
